Passage B

Floods can occur suddenly and create serious dangers. When heavy rain continues for many days, rivers and canals may overflow, causing water to spread into homes, schools, and roads. Because floods can be unpredictable, it is important to understand how to stay safe and protect your family.

First, always listen to weather reports and follow government announcements. If officials warn that your area might flood, prepare as early as possible. Move valuable items, important documents, and electronic devices to higher places in your home. You should also keep a small emergency bag ready. This bag should contain drinking water, food, medicine, a flashlight, batteries, and a phone charger.

If the water level begins to rise, avoid walking through moving water, as it can be stronger than it appears. Even water only 30 centimetres deep can knock a person down. If possible, turn off the electricity in your home to prevent electric shocks. Stay away from power lines and electric poles because they may fall during a flood.

When officials instruct you to evacuate, leave immediately and go to a safe shelter on higher ground. Do not wait until the water becomes too deep, as rescue teams may have difficulty reaching you.

After the flood, be cautious when returning home. The water may contain mud, chemicals, or sharp objects. Clean your house carefully, and wear gloves and boots for protection.

2. Leaving immediately when ordered to evacuate
3. Moving valuables and documents to higher places
4. Avoiding walking through moving water

49. According to the passage, why is turning off electricity important during floods?

1. It reduces the risk of receiving electric shocks.
2. It helps save energy during emergencies.

4. It prevents damage to appliances caused by water.

50. Which of the following is NOT mentioned in the article?
